

Web Accessibility Directive - Monitoring reports

The Web Accessibility Directive requires Member States to report on the results of their monitoring activities every three years. The Member States have published the reports from the first monitoring period on their national websites.

Member States have to regularly inform the European Commission about the implementation of the Web Accessibility Directive.

Every three years, they must publish a report on the outcome of the monitoring and on the enforcement activities.

The first such official reports are linked below. This list will be updated as the Commission receives further notifications.

As the reports are written and published by the Member States, the Commission is not responsible for their content or accessibility.

Please note that the reports are in the national language(s) of the Member States. A machine translation(*) into English is provided for ease of reference.

The next series of reports is due in December 2024.

The Member States are listed below in the official protocol order (alphabetical order in Member States' own languages).
