Media freedom and pluralism

The European Union upholds media freedom and pluralism as pillars of modern democracy and enablers of free and open debate.

Media freedom and pluralism ensure the flow of information and play a key role in holding power to account. The Commission has stepped up its work in this area, placing media freedom at the heart of its rule of law reporting and continuing to fund a variety of projects bringing tangible results. The Commission has also planned key initiatives to enhance the work and safety of journalists and adopted an action plan geared at fostering a viable media ecosystem.

The European Union's commitments to respect media freedom and pluralism and to uphold freedom of expression — which includes the right to receive and impart information without interference by public authority — are enshrined in Article 11 of the EU's Charter of Fundamental Rights (.pdf), which mirrors Article 10 of the European Convention for the Protection of Human Rights and Fundamental Freedoms.

Direct funding

The EU funds numerous projects:

- Several ongoing or under preparation projects and calls, which aim to:
  - map violations of media freedom;
  - defend journalists under threat;
  - monitor risks to media pluralism;
  - support collaborative journalism, cooperation and exchange of best practices.

- Projects run by the European Centre for Press and Media Freedom (ECPMF) and its partners geared at addressing violations of media freedom and pluralism in the EU Member States and candidate countries.

- Grants for the Centre for Media Pluralism and Media Freedom (CMPF) for the development and implementation of the 'Media Pluralism Monitor' (MPM), which provides a comprehensive overview of the risks to media freedom and pluralism across Europe, looking at 4 major areas:
  1. basic protection
  2. market plurality
  3. political independence
  4. social inclusiveness

- The Media Ownership Monitor pilot project, which will enhance the transparency of media ownership.

- The Creative Europe programme for 2021-2027, the planned budget of which will be... approximately €2.5 billion, an 80% increase compared to the previous period (2014-2020) on an EU 27 basis. It will promote European cooperation on cultural diversity and industrial competitiveness for the cultural and creative sectors. A call for journalism partnerships aimed to promoting sector-wide, cross-border collaboration among news media professionals in Europe has been published. To increase funding and ensure long-term support for media freedom, pluralism and literacy projects, a dedicated envelope of at least €75 million has been secured from this programme.

Support measures

Since the start of the COVID-19 pandemic, the Commission has put forward a series of measures to support the economy and has called on Member States to make the most of them to support the media sector.

- A temporary state aid framework was rapidly put in place and extended. A dedicated state aid guiding template for the digitalisation of news media was also published to assist Member States in the design of their national recovery and resilience plans.
- REACT-EU financial support focuses additional cohesion funds on small and medium-sized enterprises' (SMEs) vital priorities, or creative SMEs in the cultural sector recognised as a priority. These funds include employment subsidies, short-term work schemes, and liquidity and solvency for SMEs.
- The temporary support to mitigate unemployment risks in an emergency (SURE) is an instrument available for Member States to fight the adverse economic and social consequences of the COVID-19 pandemic.
- Existing tools have been adapted, including more flexibility in implementing the supported projects. For example, the existing guarantee facility for SMEs in the cultural and creative sectors, including media, allows for more flexibility in repayments of loans and facilitates lending by giving more security to the financial institutions.
- The Commission adopted an action plan to support the recovery and transformation of the media and audio-visual sector. These sectors, particularly hit by the coronavirus crisis, are essential for democracy, and Europe’s cultural diversity and digital autonomy. The action plan focuses on 3 areas of activity and 10 concrete actions. These will help the media sector recover from the crisis by facilitating and broadening access to finance. They will also help the media sector transform by stimulating investments to embrace the twin digital and green transitions while ensuring the sector’s future resilience. Finally, they will empower European citizens and companies.

Legislation and the rule of law

- In April 2022, the Commission published a Proposal for a Directive on strategic lawsuits against public participation (SLAPP). Strategic lawsuits against public participation, commonly known as ‘SLAPPs’, are a particular form of harassment used primarily against journalists and human rights defenders to prevent or penalise speaking up on issues of public interest. The proposed Directive provides courts and targets of SLAPPs with the tools to fight back against manifestly unfounded or abusive court proceedings. The proposed safeguards will apply in civil matters with cross-border implications.
- The Commission adopted a European Democracy Action Plan. It will work closely with Member States and stakeholders to improve the safety of journalists. It will provide sustainable funding for projects focusing on legal and practical assistance to journalists in the EU and elsewhere. A stakeholder dialogue was launched in March 2021 under the European News Media Forum, with interested parties being able to provide feedback on the Recommendation on the protection, safety and empowerment of journalist and other media workers adopted in September 2021. The plan also envisages promoting transparent and fair allocation of state advertising, fostering media diversity and developing a European approach on the prominence of audiovisual media services of general interest. A call for tenders has been issued for a study in this regard.

- The Rule of Law Mechanism dedicates a key section to media freedom and pluralism, which examines media regulatory authorities and bodies, the transparency of media ownership and government interference and the framework for the protection of journalists. The first Rule of Law report, covering all 27 Member States, was published on 30 September 2020. It presents a synthesis of both the rule of law situation in the EU and an assessment of the situation in each Member State, focusing on four main pillars: the justice system, the anti-corruption framework, media pluralism, and other institutional checks and balances.

- The great power held by the largest online platforms justifies considering specific ex-ante rules to safeguard competition and consumer choice online. The Digital Services Act significantly improves the mechanisms for the removal of illegal content and the effective protection of users’ fundamental rights online, including freedom of speech.

- The revised Audiovisual Media Services Directive strengthens legal safeguards in several areas covered by the Media Pluralism Monitor, namely online content moderation, the independence of media regulators, transparency of media ownership and media literacy. The Commission is following the transposition process closely.

- The EU legislature adopted rules for a fairer marketplace with Article 17 of the new Copyright Directive. These rules aim at helping right holders to be better placed regarding certain online sharing platforms. They ensure right holders receive a fairer remuneration for the use of their content. As to the new right for press publishers (Article 15 of the new Copyright Directive), this will foster plural, independent and quality journalism through a better bargaining position of press publishers towards online market players.

- As envisaged in the 2022 Commission Work Programme, the Commission is working on the European Media Freedom Act, planned for quarter 3 of 2022. The initiative will build on the revised Audiovisual Media Services Directive, which lays down rules for the independence of media regulators, promotes transparency of media ownership and recognises that editorial decisions should be free from interference. It will focus on eliminating barriers to the establishment and operation of media services and will aim to establish a common framework for advancing the internal market in the media sector in view of safeguarding media freedom and pluralism. The Commission has launched a call for evidence and an open public consultation on the upcoming European Media Freedom Act.

Council conclusions on media freedom and pluralism

On 7 December 2020, the Council of the European Union adopted Conclusions on safeguarding a free and pluralistic media system.

On 14 November 2018, the Council of the European Union adopted Conclusions on the strengthening of European content in the digital economy.

Previously, on 26 November 2013, the Council adopted Conclusions on media freedom and pluralism in the digital environment.

Colloquium on fundamental rights dedicated to media
pluralism and democracy

In November 2016, the European Commission organised a Colloquium on Fundamental Rights dedicated to Media Pluralism and Democracy. The debate was informed by discussion notes, a special Eurobarometer, as well as the results of a public consultation. The outcomes of the Colloquium were published in December 2016.

Subscribe to the latest news on this topic and more
Press release: ‘SLAPPs' strategy - Commission tackles abusive lawsuits against ...

Factsheet: democracy and media in the digital age
Factsheet: EU-funded projects to support media freedom
Factsheet: Recommendation on the safety of journalists
The 'News Initiative'
Follow the latest progress and learn more about getting involved.
On the occasion of World Press Freedom Day, the Commission reaffirmed its commitment to defending media freedom and pluralism in the EU and beyond.
The Commission welcomes the swift political agreement reached today between the European Parliament and EU Member States on the proposal on the Digital Services Act (DSA), proposed by the Commission in December 2020.

Věra Jourová, Mariya Gabriel and Thierry Breton participate in an informal meeting with the EU Ministers of Culture.

The Commission has published this week an open public consultation on the upcoming European Media Freedom Act, a landmark initiative announced by President von der Leyen in her 2021 State of the Union address to safeguard the pluralism and independence of the media in the EU internal market.
Browse Media freedom and pluralism
Related Content

Big Picture

Media and digital culture

The Commission is defending European media and digital culture with policies that empower citizens and encourage media pluralism.

Dig deeper

Monitoring media pluralism in the digital era
The Media Pluralism Monitor is a scientific tool designed to identify potential risks to media pluralism.

Multimedia actions

The EU's multimedia actions aim to strengthen news reporting on EU affairs from pan-European points of view.

Media literacy

Media literacy has never been as important as it is today. It enables citizens of all ages to navigate the modern news environment and take informed decisions.

Tackling online disinformation

The Commission is tackling the spread of online disinformation and misinformation to ensure the protection of European values and democratic systems.

See Also

Audiovisual and Media Services

These days we can watch our favourite programmes not just on TV, but also online. These shows are subject to the rules of the single market.

Supporting media and digital culture

The Commission is promoting a coherent approach on media policies, covering legislation on media services and the preservation of European cultural heritage.

Digital cultural heritage

Cultural heritage is evolving rapidly thanks to digital technologies. The momentum is now to preserve our cultural heritage and bring it to this digital decade.

Copyright

The European Commission is adapting EU copyright rules to new consumer behaviours in a Europe which values its cultural diversity.

Source URL: https://digital-strategy.ec.europa.eu/policies/media-freedom